Marine Protected Areas on the high seas

organized by Kirsty Kemp, Matthew Gollock and Alex D. Rogers

The deep sea is the largest and least understood ecosystem on Earth, and is threatened by increasing anthropogenic disturbance. Mining, drilling, acidification and warming all present serious threats to biodiversity and ecosystem functioning.

High seas, areas of open ocean that lie beyond the 200nm Exclusive Economic Zones of coastal nations, encompass ~50% of Earth's surface but remain largely unregulated. In 2002 the World Summit on Sustainable Development listed the establishment of Marine Protected Areas and representative networks by the year 2012 as a distinct goal. The UN adopted several resolutions with respect to the management of deep-sea fisheries on the high seas. However, there remains a critical need for science to translate rapidly and effectively into management policy.

The purpose of this symposium is to assess the current state of progress towards the establishment of Marine Protected Areas, particularly in those regions beyond the reaches of national jurisdiction.

MARINE PROTECTED AREAS ON THE HIGH SEAS 3 AND 4 FEBRUARY 2011

Provisional programme; updates available from www.zsl.org/mpasymposium

SESSION I: DO MPAs WORK? (PROGRESS TOWARDS 2012 GOALS and THE STATE OF PROGRESS ON HIGH SEAS MPAs)

In this opening session speakers will address the theory behind the establishment of marine protected areas and summarise their success and failure to date. When implemented in Exclusive Economic Zones where other fishery-management techniques have failed, MPAs have been largely successful in protecting biodiversity. Can they have the same effect in areas beyond national jurisdiction (the 50% of the world's surface referred to as the high seas)?

Themes:

- The impact of existing MPAs
- The existing framework of legislation
- Successes in the progress towards the 2012 target of high seas MPA network
- Will MPAs prove effective on the high seas? Are they sufficient?

SESSION II: BARRIERS TO PROGRESS

This session will address the main impediments to successfully implementing high seas legislation, including legal, socioeconomic and technical barriers.

Themes:

- IUUs (illegal, unreported, unregulated fisheries)
- Flags of Convenience fishing
- Monitoring, control and surveillance/enforcement (barriers to progress)
- Socio-economics and politics of MPAs on the high seas

SESSION III: SOLUTIONS AND THE TRANSLATION OF SCIENCE INTO POLICY

This session will directly address the very real issue of the translation of science into management policy.

Themes:

- Effectiveness of existing frameworks for devising policy
- Fixed spatial MPAs vs mobile/temporal MPAs
- What is needed in terms of law?
- What is needed in terms of science?
- The economics of MPAs on the high seas
- Monitoring, control and surveillance/enforcement (solutions)

NOTES

Registration will open at 8:30am; all places must be booked in advance. Full rate: two days £130; one day £80.

Discounted rate: (applicable for students and ZSL Friends and Fellows) two days £65; one day £40.

CALL FOR PRESENTATIONS

Marine Protected Areas on the high seas A Zoological Society of London 2-day international symposium

Thursday 3 and Friday 4 February 2011 at the Meeting Rooms, Zoological Society of London, Regent's Park (Outer Circle), London NW1 4RY, UK

There are spaces for approximately 20 posters and 13 talks at this 2-day symposium. Posters will be on display throughout, and attendees will have time to study posters and interact with speakers and other delegates during tea/coffee breaks.

Abstracts of no more than 350 words outlining presentation content should be emailed to anne.braae@zsl.org for consideration.

Please note the deadline for submission of oral abstracts is 25 November 2010 and the deadline for submission of poster abstracts is 5 January 2011.

Those who have submitted successful oral presentation proposals will be notified by 30 November 2010, while a decision on poster presentation proposals will be given by 10 January 2011. Further guidelines will be sent to successful presenters.
